THE BOSTON HOME ADDS THREE TO BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Dorchester, Mass.— The Boston Home recently added three members to its Board of Trustees: Mary Beckman of Milton, Elizabeth Colburn-Moraites of Medford, and James Seide of Hyde Park.

Mary Beckman was the first director of the Compliance Department for Children’s Hospital Boston. She has also served as a Senior Health Policy Advisor for the Executive Office of Health and Human Services in Boston, as the Deputy Legal Counsel for the Commonwealth Office of the Governor, and as an Associate in Ropes and Gray’s Health Law Practice in Boston. Beckman is a Dartmouth College graduate and received a J.D. from Yale University Law School.

Elizabeth Colburn-Moraites has worked as an advocate for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and Health Care For All. She was instrumental in the passing of the Massachusetts Patient Bill of Rights as well as the Federal Patient Bill of Rights.

Colburn-Moraites was diagnosed with Relapsing/Remitting Multiple Sclerosis (MS) in 1991; however, she is still an active artist of landscapes, portraits, still-lives, and various craftwork. She has a B.A. in Fine Arts from the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

James Seide is a manager in the Human Resources Department at the Caritas Carney Hospital, where he also served as Director of the River Street Health Center. He has also served on the boards of the Mattapan Community Development Corporation and the League of Haitian Families. He received an MBA and a B.S. in Finance from the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

“Our new board members are distinguished professionals in health care, community outreach, and advocacy. The Boston Home is certain to benefit from their experience and leadership,” said Marva Serotkin, CEO of The Boston Home.

The Boston Home is a 96-bed, not-for-profit, long-term-care facility for adults with disabilities—predominantly multiple sclerosis. It is the only facility of its kind in New England and one of a few in the United States.
